PREFACE

We are glad to get the 1919 Report of the American Board into the hands of its friends early in the church year. We have been able to do this because we have for this year curtailed the report. We have omitted the detailed accounts of each mission field which ordinarily form the bulk of our report, printing in their place the brief survey of the fields prepared by the secretaries of the Board for the Annual Meeting.

Owing to many exigencies, last year's report came out unusually late. The materials it contained were made to square with the latest facts in our hands well toward the middle of the year. Under these circumstances it seemed best for the present Report not to duplicate this work, but to publish only a brief survey of the fields. Another year it is expected that the fuller accounts of each mission field will again be presented.

Rev. Lucius H. Thayer, of New Hampshire, presented the following report of the Committee on the Treasurer's Report, and the report was received:

The notable features of the Treasurer's Report are that the receipts of the treasury in the past year have been $214,296.59 larger than the receipts of the former year, making the total receipts for the last year $1,523,302.59; and that the year has closed without any debt, but with a credit balance of $7,205.00.

The aggregate receipts are gratifying and the increase in receipts is encouraging. However, we should not glory in our giving, for a dollar now represents about sixty cents of the money contributed in most of the former years. The gifts of our constituency to colleges and educational ends, enormous in volume, take into account that money itself is abundant in America, and that it takes a large amount of our depreciated currency to meet the ever recurring expenses.

Another feature of the financial situation should be borne in mind: that beside increased expense in transportation and supplies of every kind whatever, the transactions of the Board are largely in making payments in foreign countries; and the additional cost of exchange alone over that of former years for the American Board and the Woman's Boards together was $147,848.50. We must hope for better terms in foreign exchange, now that war has ceased, but any prediction that the general necessary costs and expenditures will be lessened would be valueless. It may not be expected of this Committee that it should analyze the Treasurer's Report to criticize the details of management. However, the Report shows good classification, and the Committee is satisfied that good methods of accounting are employed in the treasury department of the Board. The bookkeeping and auditing are in capable and reliable hands. The tabulation of receipts will repay anybody's study. It would seem that the gifts from churches and from individuals should be increased in substantial measure in the coming year. The responsibilities of our laymen call for vigilance under these two heads: estates may not be sufficient to yield large legacy payments, even if wills contain liberal bequests; but every man and every woman may every week honor their present obligation to the missionary cause and to their neighbor in the foreign fields. It does not seem to this Committee that the gifts from churches and from individuals yet reach a high mark, and as the Treasurer states in his Report, the Board 'needs' annually receipts of at least $2,000,000. The need now is greater than usual, in helping to restore and rehabilitate the work and forces in lands afflicted by the late war.

This Committee, without giving expert opinion, has a high appreciation of the large investment fund as set forth in the Report. Not all of the securities held in trust hold their original market or inventory values. On the other hand, many of the securities are worth much more than their cost. Many of the securities have come to the Board directly from donors or estates, and are not investments directed by the Finance Committee. In some cases the officers of the Board are not at liberty to change the investments. A great responsibility, of course, rests upon those officers of the Board who have to do with the investment of the funds as a whole. We believe that a study of the tables annexed to the Treasurer's Report will attest and justify the sound judgment and faithful labors of the Finance Committee. We deem it a credit to the administration that all its properties are scheduled and set forth for the observation of every patron of the Board who will take interest to study the same.

Whether the expenditures of the Board have been the most judicious possible, no man can tell. We are confident that they have been directed with prudence and fidelity, in most trying times. Other men might have placed the money in other places, or might not have done so. This Committee has no wisdom that would lead it to presume that the succinct, clear, and reasonable apportionment and application of funds has in any place or degree failed to be for the best.

Rev. William E. Barton, of Illinois, made the following report for his Committee:

The Committee to which was referred such portions of the Report of the Prudential Committee as were not specifically referred to other Committees, notes with especial interest the need of a special fund to meet the phenomenal conditions of exchange. The need of such a fund appears to be so apparent as to require no discussion. We therefore recommend the approval of the proposal to raise a special fund of not less than $100,000 extra for the purpose of meeting the excessive cost of exchange in the countries where such excessive cost exists.

An invitation having been received from the Board of Foreign Missions of the Reformed Church in America to participate in a special service on Sunday, October 26, at the Central Reformed Church in Grand Rapids, to commemorate the one hundredth anniversary of Dr. John Scudder's departure for the foreign mission field, it was voted to accept the invitation, and Assistant Recording Secretary Capen was appointed to represent the Board.

The Business Committee introduced the following Resolutions on Armenia, and they were unanimously adopted:

In view of the one hundred years of philanthropic service to all the peoples of Turkey and the large investment of life and property made by the people of America through the Christian Church; in view of the present crisis threatening not only the continuance of this humanitarian service but the very existence of the people for whom it was established; and in view of the fact that the United States is the only one of the great Powers which is in a position to render this service; be it therefore

Resolved, That it is the earnest conviction of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions assembled in Grand Rapids, Mich., that action immediately be taken by the United States to protect the people of Armenia, such as is contemplated in the Williams Resolution now before the Senate. Be it further

Resolved, That copies of this our resolution be forwarded to the President of the United States, the Committee on Foreign Relations, and the leaders of the majority and minority parties in the Senate. Be it further

Resolved, That a committee be appointed to correspond with the churches of our denomination to the end that they should urge this action upon their several representatives in the United States Senate.

Sec. Brewer Eddy spoke on the new material which has been prepared by the officers of the American Board and of the Woman’s Board for young people’s missionary instruction.

Addresses on the Armenian and Turkish situation were made by Rev. A. M. West, of North Dakota, an Armenian pastor, and Rev. J. H. House, of Salonica. Following this there was an open hour of questions from the floor, which were answered by Dr. House, Dr. Hume, and Secretary Barton. The questions centered mainly upon the possibility of an American mandatory for Armenia.

At 4.15 the annual Service of Intercession was held, the leader being Acting Sec. Alden H. Clark.

After benediction by Rev. Alan M. Fairbank, of South Dakota, the President declared a recess.

EVENING SESSION

The Board assembled for the closing session of the meeting at 7.30, Vice-President Jones in the chair. Dr. Charles H. Richards led the devotional service.

The Vice-President introduced Rev. Timothy T. Lew, of the faculty of Union Seminary, who spoke on “A Chinese Verdict on Missionary Work in China.”

President Moore delivered the President’s Annual Address, speaking on the theme, “Present Obligations.”

After prayer and benediction by Rev. James A. Richards, of Illinois, the Annual Meeting was declared adjourned.

A simultaneous meeting was held in the First Methodist Episcopal Church.

After a song service, the meeting was called to order at 7.50 by Rev. Robert A. Hume, who offered prayer.

Rev. Mark Williams, a missionary in China for fifty-three years, was introduced and spoke briefly. Rev. Danjo Ebina, pastor of the Hongo Kumiai Church in Tokyo, Japan, was also introduced.

Rev. Doremus Scudder delivered an address on “A Century of Transformation in Hawaii”; Associate Sec. D. Brewer Eddy spoke on “America’s Yes or No”; and Dr. William Shaw, of the United Society of Christian Endeavor, had for his subject, “The Hour To Be Young.”

Five young men, about to enter upon missionary work abroad, were introduced and spoke briefly: Walter B. Wiley, Harold E. LeMay, L. C. Peabody, Robert Shaw, and Walter N. James.

Assistant Recording Sec. E. W. Capen presented the commission of the American Board as a missionary to Central Turkey to Walter B. Wiley.

The benediction was pronounced by Rev. Mark Williams, and adjournment was taken at 9.50.

Attest:

OSCAR F. MAURER, Recording Secretary.
THE AMERICAN BOARD IN THE VICTORY YEAR

Report of the Prudential Committee for the Home Department for the Year Ending August 31st, 1919

The period covered by this report includes the 11th of November, 1918, the date on which the Armistice was signed. While it is true that the last Annual Meeting was held on a date subsequent to that great event, yet this is the Victory Year of which it is our privilege to make report to you, honorable Commissioners of this Board. We have had Victory Loans and we have had Victory Parades. Our hearts have burned within us as we have cheered returning generals, as we have watched wounded boys tenderly carried down and up our avenues, as we have seen company after company, regiment after regiment of splendid men march past in perfect step, shining with helmet and bayonet, men without whose dash and daring there could have been no victory year for us.

After such experiences it would have been sad and disappointing to come to you in this annual report to acknowledge defeat. We thank God that this is not necessary, but that, as you have heard just now from our Treasurer, we can come to announce Victory. The campaign of the 110th year of the American Board has been won. For us, too, this has been a Victory Year. Once again we thank God and take courage. Great and unusual as the expenses of this year have been, they have all been paid. We close the first decade of the second century of this Board's existence with the Te Deum.

We are sure that this Victory of the Board has been made possible because the spirit of sacrifice in the American people, so strong throughout the war period, has continued to animate the supporters of this Board during the later months as during the earlier months of this historic year.

I. BACKWARD

1. RECEIPTS

The report of the Treasurer has shown a grand total of receipts for this fiscal year of $1,523,302.59. This amount exceeds the grand total reported by the Treasurer one year ago by $214,296.59. It leaves the Board with all obligations met and a credit balance of $7,205.06. We seldom have the opportunity to rejoice over a result as favorable as this. This large sum, so much larger than it has been before, is in itself an expression of gratitude to God for the successful termination of the war, a great voluntary thank offering.

In no item of this report do we take more satisfaction than in the gain of $49,579.09 made in the gifts from churches. This is a long step forward toward completion of the apportionment referred to later in this report. When living givers, churches and individuals, manifest so deep an interest in the Board's welfare, it is needless to worry about the future.

The grand total this year carries the Board well over the line into the second half of the second million dollars of income. It is against all tradition for the Board to beat a retreat. Two million dollars income a year cannot be far ahead.
The three Woman's Boards are entitled to a large share of the credit of this year's success. Without their constant cooperation, we could not come through the year with this large total of money raised and work done. Their share in the grand total this year has been $393,935.97, and their share in the increase of contributions this year over last year is $4,711.13.

It must be borne in mind that not even so great an increase in income as $214,296.59 warrants the inference that the work of the Board can be largely increased. The gain in receipts does no more than measure the gain in cost of the work we have been doing. In fact, it does not even do that, for if the Prudential Committee had granted the increases in support of missionaries and native workers sorely needed this year, our credit would have been turned into a large debit balance. Let us rejoice, but at the same time let us resolve upon soon coming to the goal of the second million.

2. RECRUITS

We are happy to report 66 new workers enlisted by the Board this year, 48 being appointed for life service and 18 for a term of years. Of the 66, there are 11 ordained men, 4 physicians, the remainder being teachers, nurses, agriculturists, and missionary wives. Massachusetts has furnished 9; New York, 8; Illinois, 7; New Hampshire and Ontario, 4 each; Connecticut and Kansas, 3 each; New Jersey, Michigan, Iowa, Nebraska, Minnesota, South Dakota, and California, 2 each; while 11 other states have supplied 1 each.

Oberlin again heads the list of colleges, supplying 5 of our candidates; Middlebury, 3; with Yale, University of Chicago, University of Illinois, Wheaton, Mt. Holyoke, Wellesley, Fairmount, and Syracuse University each supplying 2.

Forty-six of the group are Congregationalists, 7 Presbyterians, 7 Methodists, 3 Episcopalians, 1 Baptist, and 1 Friend, but they all go out united under the banner of the American Board in the service of a common Lord.

The names and destinations of the group follow:

3. MEETINGS OF THE PRUDENTIAL COMMITTEE

In conducting the work of the American Board, twenty-eight regular meetings of the Prudential Committee have been held at headquarters in the Congregational House, Boston. In addition to the regular bi-weekly meetings of the Prudential Committee, there have been frequent and extended meetings of sub-committees. Only so could the extensive interests of the Board receive proper attention. It has been a labor of love. We have enjoyed rendering the service which you have asked of us. We congratulate those who may come after us upon the privilege of such service.

4. LITERARY OUTPUT

The Missionary Herald, pronounced by friends and rivals alike to be the best missionary magazine published in this or any other country, has continued its useful career. Its consolidation with the monthly magazines of the Woman's Boards has been delayed by the exigencies of these troubled times, but will be taken up as soon as conditions permit. The problems presented by such a change require careful study and far more time and thought than could be given this year.

The other publications of the Board, News Bulletin, Envelope Series, leaflets, and news bureau, have continued with regularity.

5. STEREOPTICON LECTURES

The records of our four offices show that our stereopticon lectures have been used this year 1,580 times in the churches of the country, as follows:

This total is lower than it would have been but for the epidemic of influenza which prevailed throughout the country during the first half of the year, and interfered so seriously with all forms of public assembly. The educational value of these lectures with their fine pictures, presented to 1,580 audiences in the country, must be very great. This is one of the important agencies in the work of disseminating information and gathering funds.

6. RELIEF WORK

Much time of our missionaries has been devoted this year to various forms of relief work. Close cooperation with the Committee for Relief in the Near East has been given in collecting and distributing the more than $30,000,000 which have been contributed in America for sufferers in Syria, Armenia, Caucasus, other parts of the Turkish Empire, Persia, and the Balkan States. This Relief Committee has now been incorporated by special act of Congress, and will be in position to function permanently in receiving funds and aiding in reconstruction work in the Near East. This Committee will undoubtedly give great aid to the missionary cause in Near Eastern lands.

The hearts of all missionaries have been greatly burdened for the famine sufferers in India. Relief work has been the order of the day so far as funds have permitted. Quick response was also made by the missionary force in Japan and China to the calls which came from Siberia for volunteers in connection with the American Red Cross and the Young Men's Christian Association.

Among all these appeals for aid, none is more deserving of attention than those which come from the great army of children, made orphans in Armenia and elsewhere by the unheard-of barbarities of this great war. We rejoice that so many of our devoted missionaries will be in position to offer guidance and help to these helpless children. God grant that we may be able to respond adequately to the appeals which will be made to us!

7. UNUSUAL EXPENSE

While this has been the year of victory and we can never cease to be thankful enough for the breaking of the war grip which held the world twelve months ago, yet the end of the war by no means brought the end of the difficult conditions into which the war had plunged the world. The evil results of sin last for generations. So this has been a year of continued upheaval and mounting expenses. The exodus of missionaries from Turkey and their return is a matter of large cost to the Board—an unusual item of expense. The high cost of living has affected missionaries abroad and at home. A missionary in China because of the extremely unfavorable rate of exchange has found himself, after drawing his salary this year, in possession of about half as many dollars (Chinese dollars) as he formerly received, and each of his diminished store of dollars worth less than ever before in his experience or memory. The Board has felt obliged to guarantee the missionaries, so far as possible, against loss from this unfavorable rate of exchange by sending more gold dollars for salaries to Japan, China, and India. The effect of this has been to add the unusual item of $100,000 to our expenses for which no provision has been made in the usual channels of Board support. This has been met, for this year, out of the Emergency Fund which you started at Hartford a year ago.

8. OPENING DOORS

At the same time we are gladdened by signs of a more favorable attitude toward the gospel on every hand. In the period just ahead we shall be able to extend our work very greatly. Men everywhere will be eager to hear more of the message of Christ from these messengers who have been their only friends in the hour of their greatest need. The mission boards of America certainly have never had such a glorious opportunity to help men to an experience of the Kingdom of God as the opportunity which faces them today. What a testing time for us!

9. HIGH-GRADE WORK AND WORKERS

The very success of missionary work is bound to create a demand for improvement in the grade of work done. The work of medical missions in China was less exacting when the Chinese knew nothing about modern medicine, and when no China Medical Board was working in China. Today China knows how a first-class hospital should be equipped. Can we allow the Chinese to turn their backs upon mission schools and hospitals because these are inferior in their equipment, or do we desire rather that any institution which represents the cause of Christ in China shall be the very highest grade—a model and an inspiration to those who come to see and use it?

Furthermore, the tendency of these days on the mission field is toward union in all forms of missionary activity. Presumably, when missions join forces, something better than the sum of that which all have done before is to be anticipated. Union is for strength, efficiency, an adequate grapple with the forces of idolatry and ignorance. Accordingly the demand comes back upon us for larger appropriations. Missionary work can no longer be a makeshift. It must be done as it ought to be done or not attempted at all, for poorly equipped, badly supported, inadequately conceived forms of missionary work will soon do more harm than good.

It follows that there should be no letting down in high standards for missionaries if we are to meet the constantly growing and more intelligent demands of the foreign fields. We must send, as we have always sent, the very best graduates of our colleges, men and women capable of meeting every demand, intellectual, moral, and spiritual, of the peoples to whom we send them. The demand for specialists has reached every corner of the world. Let this Board plant its feet more firmly than ever upon the rock principle of high-grade missionaries.
II. FORWARD

Let us point out a few matters which may be classed as urgent for the next year and to which we desire to direct the attention of the Corporate body.

1. THE INTER-CHURCH WORLD MOVEMENT

We ought to tie ourselves up closely to this movement and to do all in our power to obtain from it for the missions of this Board such additions to force and equipment as shall result from the arrousement, the broad missionary education, and the appeals of this great union interdenominational undertaking. This movement is by no means exclusively a foreign missionary movement. All mission boards, home and foreign, in our own communion and in all Protestant communions will work together. That is one of the outstanding facts which makes this movement tremendously significant. It is one of the boldest yet sanest plans by which men of this generation may do their part to meet the needs of the world.

First, there will be the surveys of actual and urgent needs of missionary work at home and abroad. These facts having been collected and carefully sifted, there will follow an educational campaign to put this program before the churches. Next, there will be a wide publicity effort to enlist through the religious and secular press the interest of that large number of Protestant people who are not members of any church. The fourth feature of the movement will be a simultaneous drive on a certain day or days during 1920 to secure the investment of lives and of money by which the world program may be carried out.

No man can foresee all the results of such a movement. Doubtless some impossible results will be expected by some people. Yet it seems reasonable to believe that a great and a well-considered program, based upon sober facts, will enlist great resources in both life and money; and that the effort to carry out this program will help to strengthen the Christian foundation of American democracy and to discharge in a notable way our obligation for world evangelization.

It may well be true, also, that the success of this movement will prove to the world the essential unity of the Protestant forces of America. God grant that it may be the beginning of a worldwide revival of religion!

2. NEW FUND TO MEET NEW NEEDS

We need again a special fund of not less than $100,000 with which to meet this phenomenal condition of exchange. No one can tell how long this situation will continue, but it cannot be permanent. It seems more reasonable to meet this need for another year by a special effort, in the hope that it may have disappeared entirely by the end of the year. Meet it we must, and meet it our regular budget cannot. We therefore urge that in gratitude for this Victory Year you will authorize a movement to provide the Board this year with at least $100,000 extra for the purpose named.
3. HIGHER EDUCATION ON MISSION FIELDS

We have referred above to the demands upon our purses of the union institutions abroad. Most of these institutions are colleges and universities. With the Methodist and the Presbyterian bodies seeking great endowments of many millions with which to discharge their share of responsibility toward these union efforts, it is a pertinent question where the part expected from us is to be found.

In Turkey will arise large demands for funds in connection with our educational plants. Armenian orphans must be educated whether an Armenian State is established or not. Turks and Kurds, Bulgarians and Greeks, Albanians and Serbians will turn to us for education. We desire to give them education in an atmosphere permeated with the spirit of Christ—that spirit of service which alone can make a decent civilization.

Whichever way we look toward the mission field, we cannot fail to see the need for a greatly increased Higher Educational Endowment Fund. We believe that it is a better policy to place a large sum in the hands of the Board to be administered for the benefit of its growing schools, through the period of their growth into independence, than to give the same sums over to those schools while they are still young and while their future is precarious. We believe that one of the great needs of this Board at the present time is for the enlargement of this Higher Educational Endowment Fund from its present total of about $1,200,000 to not less than $10,000,000, said sum to remain the property of this Board and to be administered for the benefit of its institutions abroad.

Appeals have come frequently to your Committee to appoint secretaries for certain specific lines of work—medical, industrial, and educational. We believe the time has arrived to make a careful survey of the present executive organization of the Board, and to begin the solution of this problem by the appointment, possibly, of an educational secretary. Such a secretary might well devote himself to an effort to complete the Higher Educational Endowment Fund and to the administration of the Board's higher educational institutions in foreign lands.

We venture to make this as a recommendation to our successors upon the Prudential Committee.

4. COÖPERATION OF CORPORATE MEMBERS

We wish you to know how much we desire the hearty interest of every Corporate Member. We hope there will be an increasing number of Corporate Members who will seek a missionary of their own to be supported as their personal representative on the foreign field.

We hope that Corporate Members will solicit gifts for the Board's treasury, and especially that they will assist in obtaining conditional gifts and legacies.

We hope that in the churches to which they belong Corporate Members will take every occasion to magnify the importance and glory of missionary service, urging upon their young people the wisdom of seeking appointment as missionaries of this Board. With such a body of members, equal in zeal and greatly outnumbering those of the past, a great future is certain for the Board as it faces the second decade of its second century.
5. COMPLETE THE APPORTIONMENT

It is high time—past time. There is nothing more to be said upon this subject. It is all perfectly obvious, but the subject may not be omitted from any catalogue of urgent matters.

6. PREACH STEWARDSHIP

We wish to add an exhortation to all pastors and preachers to stress the subject of stewardship. It has been the fashion to look upon tithers as out of date, as belonging to the phase of legalism. "We live by the spirit." Perhaps so, and give less than those who tithe. We fear it is too much the spirit of this world by which many Christians in these days are proud to live.

While Methodists, a communion whose average financial ability does not exceed our own, are giving $6 per member annually for missions, and while Presbyterians are giving $4 per member, Congregationalists have given $2 per member. Such a splendid record of these sister communions should spur us to better things in giving. Let Congregationalists return to their former place at the head of the list of givers, and put their giving on a scale commensurate with the present colossal needs of the world. (1 Cor. 4:1; 1 Peter 4:10; 1 Cor. 9:17.)

7. PARENTS' VOLUNTEER BAND

We have dreamed of the creation of a new movement, one which should enlist parents all over the country to dedicate their children to missionary service—a league of parents who are willing to let their children go. While in many cases parents today would rejoice if their children cared to go, there are many cases where the children who do desire to go face opposition at home.

The cause of Christ needs the brightest and the best youth of America to go into all the world to preach his gospel. We appeal for the aid of parents.

8. SPIRITUAL VALUE OF MISSIONS

We would call attention to the fact that however much the cause must mean to heathen lands, it also means much to us at home. On November 3, 1819, the Sally Ann sailed from Boston harbor, bearing our first missionaries to Turkey, Levi Parsons and Pliny Fiske. How rich the history of this century! How many and how great the personalities that have been, one might almost say, created by this missionary venture. Herrick, Greene, Raynolds, Tracy, Riggs, Bliss, Barnum, Hamlin, Washburn, Jessup, Van Dyke—these are among the heroic names of this century, men who have thrilled many an Annual Meeting of this Board with their tales of missionary adventure. World characters they have become by their contact with these vast and intricate world problems. Slowly they advanced through the century, mastering language, translating the Bible, establishing schools, colleges, hospitals, taking upon themselves strange diseases of the people, living with the people, dying for the people, until today—how strange, yet how wonderful, the end of the century. We find Armenians and Turks—turning alike to America in confidence and trust, and declaring that of all the nations of the world they can trust America to help and not to exploit them. This is the reward of the century, the hope and opportunity of the future. Surely God has set before us an open door.

And while these are centennial days for our Turkey Mission, the record of the years spells also a century since our first missionaries landed on the shores of Hawaii. There, too, are to be traced the Christian influence of one hundred years of missionary service. The millions of dollars and the scores and hundreds of lives given for these two widely separated missions, Turkey and Hawaii, seemed to us a short time ago like a marvelous tale. But the tale has dwindled in the light of the stupendous expenditures of money and of lives poured out to win the great war and keep the world free. The world can only be free when men love God first and then love one another as they love themselves. Indispensable in the march of world freedom are the sacrifices of these who have said with Paul, "I hold not my life of any account as dear unto myself so that I may accomplish my course and the ministry which I received from the Lord Jesus, to testify the gospel of the grace of God" (Acts 20: 24). These are the men and women who "have hazarded their lives for the name of the Lord Jesus Christ" (Acts 15: 26), and who have reckoned that "the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed" (Rom. 8: 18).

And, finally, may we append in brief the confession of our faith as we close the record for this year, and hand over the responsibilities of this Committee to those new men whom you shall choose today.

We believe

That no enterprise is comparable in fascination or importance with the missionary enterprise, for it deals with the most fundamental concerns of society.

We believe

That the missionary opportunity of the present and the immediate future surpasses all missionary opportunities that have gone before.

Facing that new day, beholding the Christ standing before the open door of the world and signaling for workers to go in with him to the harvest, shall we not say,

"Jesus of Nazareth, we are here"?
SURVEY OF THE FIELDS, 1918–1919

Foreign Missions in a Year of Upheaval

By

Secretary WILLIAM E. STRONG
Associate Secretary ENOCH F. BELL

[Secretary Strong’s Section]

In the division of fields there fall to this part of the survey the four missions in China, including a new one, the Shaowu Mission organized this year, the two in India, and the one in Ceylon—seven in all.

The “Flu”

The year under review has been in all these fields an unusually disturbed year, even as it has been in this country; and in part for the same reasons. The Spanish Influenza, which closed stores and schools and churches, interrupted travel, postponed the Annual Meeting of the Board, and whose heavy toll of loss was felt in a multitude of homes and churches in the United States, was no less disturbing and even more deadly in the Far East. In India alone there were over five million deaths. It wrought its ravage among the churches, carried off native pastors and workers of every sort, prevented tours, broke up planned forms of work, and in some lines reduced results below normal figures. That the Marathi Mission was able to report only one-half as many additions to the churches as the preceding year was partly due to the sweep of this epidemic. Failure of rains and consequent famine conditions in this field added a burden which for a large part of the year, and even to its end, interfered with regular lines of work; communities were broken up; their people scattered in the search for food; relief enterprises were compelled; a host of orphans were left helpless and destitute and could not be overlooked; the thoughts of all hearts were bent absorbedly on escape from starvation. In the Madura Mission similar conditions produced similar results.

The Floods

In Ceylon, to the ravage of the “flu” was added the disaster of floods; the Jaffna peninsula, last November, experienced the greatest flood known in thirty-four years; twenty-seven inches of rain fell in twenty-four hours; villages were inundated, gardens were demolished, sheep, goats, and cattle were lost.

The story of the flood in North China runs back of the year being reviewed, but its tale of woe extended into this year and affected work in our Chihli and Shantung stations. And North China added the aftermath of the plague of 1918, which, appearing first in Shansi, leaped to threaten other regions even as far as Nanking; but which happily was quickly stayed, in large measure through the prompt and devoted labors of Christian Chinese and missionary doctors, an object lesson which called forth the grateful praise of high officials as well as of the common people. Latest reports from Foochow tell of terrible ravage from cholera
—3,000 deaths a week. It was no uncommon sight to watch seven funeral processions at one time crossing “The Bridge of Ten Thousand Ages.”

Restlessness Follows the War

During the year, also, India and China, no less than the United States, have felt the restlessness that has followed the war. There was the same elation of spirit over its closing. One of the noblest and most significant celebrations of the signing of the Armistice was that held last Thanksgiving Day, when the President of China, with high officials and representatives of all the Allied nations as his guests and with guards from the several legations in attendance, proceeded after imperial fashion through the columns of Chinese troops and beneath their colors up the steps of terrace after terrace to the portico of an historic temple, where he made his address to the assembly and ceremonially bowed to the flag of each of these nations as it passed before him.

But in the settlement of peace, restlessness has developed in the East as in the West. China’s civil war proved more serious and disturbing than in our absorption in European affairs we were apt to realize. Its desultory fighting, its forays of soldier-bandits, its relaxing of even so much law and order as usually obtains, entailed much of interruption to mission work in Foochow and Shaowu and in Shantung. To this disturbance was added the kindling fire of resentment against Japan’s claims in China, and the consideration given thereto in the discussions of the Peace Conference at Paris. In the early summer broke forth at Peking student strikes which spread to other cities, awoke an unexpected and unprecedented national spirit among the people generally, promoted the scheme of a commercial boycott of Japan, and set in motion a revolt against the military autocracy that has been ruling and misruling China which has not yet died down.
This student strike affected mission schools and colleges at Peking, Foochow, and elsewhere, and while hailed as the sign of a better day coming in China’s government, added to the difficulties of the year.

India’s restlessness during the last twelvemonth is known to every reader of world news. The promised reforms that should bring her a larger measure of self-government in recognition of her loyalty to England in the war are being pushed forward in Parliament; high officials of state are irretrievably committed thereto.
Their proposals have seemed only to provoke fresh agitation and sedition. Not since mutiny days has India been in so ominous a state as this last year. Outbreaks principally in the north, in the Punjab, but cropping out in sporadic cases elsewhere and even in Bombay, have showed an ugly temper of discontent that must be reckoned with.

Mission Devolution

The political bearings of the situation are not our direct concern, but a phase of this unrest appears in missionary affairs. The Indian is a good agitator; it is a congenial task to criticize his government; sometimes he turns aside to prod the missionary cause. Indian Christians as a rule are loyal, coöperative; sometimes it seems almost too docile and submissive. Now there are signs of a growing spirit of independence, of a desire for authority if not for responsibility; of a drawing away from missionary influence or supervision in the desire for more control of Indian Christianity. Agitations have begun in India, and some of her foremost Christian men are engaged in them, urging that the missions turn over funds, work, and offices to Indian management. The American Board missions are fortunately placed in this discussion. They have for the most part enjoyed mutually happy and trustful relations between native and foreign workers, and they have exceptionally strong and qualified native leaders to whom to commit increasing power and responsibility. The death last May of Narayan W. Tilak, poet, patriot, and devoted Christian leader in the Marathi Mission and indeed in all Hindustan, was an immeasurable loss at an hour when his great influence with his countrymen seemed peculiarly needed.

In these India fields, as in Ceylon and in all the China missions, earnest thought and careful experiment have this year been given to the problem of devolution, as it is called, or the transfer to the care of native churches and Christian leaders of responsibilities which in the earlier periods were inevitably carried by the missionaries. It is cause for congratulation that this era of unrest, most noticeable in India but recognized to some extent in all these fields, finds the American Board missions awake to the problem and alert to discover its way of solution.

H. C. L.

One other disturbing factor of the year which has affected these missionary lands as it has this country of ours is the higher cost of living. That is a term with which we are all familiar; it reflects a pinch which we all have felt to greater or less extent; a fruitful topic of conversation in every home and in every social gathering. But whatever hardships and privations it may have entailed for us in the United States are literally as nothing compared with the suffering and want that it has brought upon the multitudes in the Far East. The missionaries have been compelled to watch the sorrowful spectacle; to the losses and distress occasioned by famine, flood, and pestilence which have been noted above has been added the burden of mounting prices and lessening money values.

Peoples always on the edge of want have this year been confronted with doubled prices for the simplest foodstuffs; always underfed, they have, many of them, actually faced starvation for themselves and families; Christian pastors and workers have been unable to make their meager salaries provide a meager living; they have been forced into debt, or compelled to withdraw and seek some work that would gain them an actual livelihood. Mission funds, in ordinary times insufficient, because of sagging exchange were in danger of being cut in two in China, and reduced by ten per cent in India and Ceylon. It became necessary for the Board to guarantee exchange both for the maintenance of its missionaries' salaries and the saving from ruin of its work and its native workers; entailing an increase in the cost of carrying these missions of not less than $100,000. Even so, the lessened purchasing power of money remained to harass the life of those whose support was based upon a bare living in ordinary times.
Churches and schools in these missions in some cases have been compelled to lose their leaders, who were drawn away to more gainful employments. That this result happened seldom is a tribute to the loyalty of the Christian workers, who stuck by their tasks with most gratifying devotion. Despite the sacrifices which thus were made for the work's sake on all these fields, it could not be helped that many activities should be stayed, new openings should be unmet, and that there should be felt some slackening of endeavor in view of insurmountable difficulties of finance. We are compelled to contemplate a situation of distress in each of these seven missions because of the financial disturbances that have attended the war, and that have culminated in the year past.

While the year has been in these ways a disturbed and harassing year for missionary work, it yet appears, as we review it, a year of notable accomplishment and in some ways of significant advance.

Missionary Education in India

It has been a prosperous and fruitful year in the field of education. Mission schools of every grade were never more popular in India or China than now. The proposal to give to India a larger measure of self-rule, to open more widely civil and military offices to Indian subjects, has had this somewhat unexpected result. It has roused the substantial middle classes of Indian society to a passionate fear that they are likely to be drawn into a heavier and more detested bondage; that these offices, now to be opened to men of the land, will be promptly secured by the Brahmins, hitherto the educated and dominant class in Indian life, and that the tyranny of Brahmin rule from which British authority had rescued India will be restored.

In their anxiety these middle classes have bestirred themselves to seek a way of defense. They have assembled in a host of conferences through the country, have agitated, discussed, and planned as to what should be done. And they have turned to education for their children as their defense. They have realized that they must equip their sons to stand on an equality of knowledge and training with the Brahmins if they are to have their proper representation in the leadership of the new India. In their perplexities they have often turned to the missionaries for counsel, have invited them to speak from their platforms, and in some cases have even proposed to come over en masse to Christianity as a means of gaining advantage. For this reason, in part, mission schools in India, of lower and higher grade, have in general gained in popular favor. Losses in numbers, due to the epidemic, the famine, and the heavier poverty, have been met by this turning to the schools of those who come under the fresh impulse of an advancing India; they have brought not only increasing numbers, but a higher grade of pupils in character, ability, and resource. The task and the opportunity of the teachers in mission school and college are thus magnified in importance.

In Ceylon

Mission education in Ceylon is made more serious by the immense numbers to be cared for in proportion to the size of the mission. Ten thousand pupils in the village schools constitute a problem indeed. The falling into disrepair of the simple mud and thatch structures which have served for school buildings has for years called for rebuilding on more substantial lines. Government school inspectors have been pressing to this end and threatening to withdraw grants unless it is met. Mission plans, reasonable and wise, have been held up in the disturbance of war times. Some schools have been closed; others are in danger of being abandoned; relief or retrenchment are the alternatives.

A further difficulty comes from a revival of religious activity on the part of Hindus, Moslems, and Buddhists in Ceylon. Spurred on by the spectacle of Christian schools, they are taking steps to raise funds, either by direct contributions or the application of temple incomes, to establish schools for the education of boys and girls where they will not be in danger of contact with Christianity. Hundreds of thousands of dollars are thus being secured for this new and vigorous drive at Christian education in Ceylon. The American Board mission still has its thousands of pupils, its prestige, its corps of loyal teachers, and the witness of its product in strong and influential men and women living in Jaffna and scattered widely through the East Indies. But it is a crucial time as to the future, whether it shall be advance or decline. It must be advance.

In China

In the Chinese fields it is still the day of mission opportunity in education. Ultimately government schools will doubtless command the situation, particularly in the elementary grades. China, a dozen years ago, outlined a comprehensive and ambitious scheme of public education from the kindergarten to the university. Her huge land was districted and apportioned so that every corner should be reached, and the full course of schools be made available for every section. But China has not yet had the teachers or the funds to operate her system. And she is not making rapid gain thereto.

At present this China which we regard as a passive and peace-loving country is reported to be devoting eighty per cent of her annual expenditure to military affairs, though not all of it, to be sure, goes into the pockets of the soldiers, much less into the development of army and navy; and only two per cent of her budget is spent on education. There is time yet for the Christian school to render its service and to find its place of power. Such place it surely has. In the cities and the country districts alike the mission schools are crowded. A young missionary at a country station in the Foochow Mission writes: “The school (i.e., the Boys’ School) is coming along splendidly. There are eighty-five pupils this year and we have the strongest faculty that has ever been here in the history of the school.” And he adds: “A few weeks ago there were fifteen boys examined for church membership, and four of them were accepted. I anticipate that the larger portion of them will be accepted at the next examination. Our school is a strong evangelizing agency.” Similar testimony comes as to practically all our educational work in China. It is the great delight and hope of the missions; the chance to touch and to mold the men and women of influence for China’s tomorrow.
An outstanding educational event of the year in our missions in China has been the opening of the academy at Tunghsien, which offers high and preparatory grades to the boys of the three stations in Chihli Province, Peking—Tunghsien, Tientsin, and Paotingfu; a school to which Broadway Tabernacle has just donated $40,000 and its honored pastor's name, the Charles E. Jefferson Academy, which already provides for 150 students and seems destined to be as important for China as have been the historic academies of New England for the United States.

The educational forces of our China missions have made it their business this past year to push the new phonetic script which China has adopted and which is meant to overcome the illiteracy of her people. Astonishing results have been obtained that make the missionaries enthusiastic advocates of the new system; its natural channel of promotion seems to be through the Christian communities.

Evangelism in India

In evangelism, the year past has been no less notable than in education in the history of these seven missions. Those in India have had the inspiration of evangelistic tours by two men very unlike in method and in manner, but both having remarkable effect on their Indian audiences—Sunder Singh and Sherwood Eddy. Mr. Eddy's visits to lands of the East are well known and understood. This year he and his party fastened their attention upon the Christian church and community rather than upon large assemblies of non-Christians. Their message was for personal evangelism, the call to rise and go forth to win others. At the great centers of missionary work in India they wrought with direct and effective appeal upon the hearts of Christians, stirring them to a new outreaching purpose.

Sunder Singh, the other of these two apostles of evangelism, a wandering Christian friar or Sadhu of the Punjab, wearing a saffron robe and a small turban, walking barefoot, speaking with soft voice and with the serene light of faith upon his face, is a true holy man after India's heart, but with the Christian message on his lips and with the Christian spirit of service and sacrifice animating his life. He has made a profound impression wherever he has gone, has drawn great audiences and won fresh attention to Christianity as a religion, not of the foreigner alone, but of the people of the land. In Ceylon, which the Sadhu also visited, the impression was no less marked; fresh impulse was given to every form of Christian work. A woman's conference held afterward at Manepay resulted in 500 pledges for definite forms of service, every church in the field being reached.

In Ceylon

This year in Ceylon has also marked the undertaking of a more aggressive and systematic evangelism, under the lead of Rev. Giles G. Brown. Relying not on large public meetings but on personal visits to the people's homes, a method less spectacular but even more difficult and, it is hoped, more permanently productive has been followed whose full results have yet to be determined.

In China

No great mission field today is pressing the evangelistic side of its work more vigorously or systematically than is China. Under the auspices of the China
Continuation Committee, whose missionaries' survey covers the entire country, there has developed an Evangelistic Committee whose field also is nationwide and which has done much to stimulate and guide that department of labor. A simultaneous week of evangelism, the "win one" slogan, the conferences and training classes established for Chinese workers, have thus been fostered, until there has come to pass an exceptional unanimity of feeling and purpose in this direction. In the American Board missions increasing use is being made of native pastors and teachers, theological students, and even high school boys for this work. Significant results have appeared in many quarters, as in the Paotingfu and Fenchow fields in North China, and in the Ingtai region of the Foochow Mission. The influence given to systematic evangelism in the North China Mission under the lead of the lamented Murray Frame abides in a deepened sense of the need, value, and possibilities of this outreaching effort.

Advances in Union Movements

The year past has witnessed some remarkable advances both in India and China in union movements in missionary work. The East is in this respect moving far faster than is the West, requiring a less volume of discussion to each foot of progress and sometimes registering a sudden advance that is almost unbelievable. For example, the South India United Church, comprising the Indian Christians connected with a half dozen mission boards of America, England, and Europe, the American Board being among the number, at its General Assembly held last month considered a proposition for organic union with the Anglican body on terms proposed at a previous conference of representatives of all these elements. Report has not been received yet as to the final decision, but the feeling at the preliminary conference was unanimously in favor of the plan and the several missions were said to be in general approval.

The Basel Mission

That same South India United Church has within this year demonstrated the reality and vitality of its purpose to bind together the Christian forces of its region, as it has assumed the care of the Basel Mission's educational and evangelistic undertakings. This mission, which had been maintained in large part by German funds and German missionaries, was stripped of its resources both of men and money by the war. To save it from collapse, the Indian Government took over its extensive industrial enterprises, and has been continuing them by agreement with the mission authorities in Switzerland. The more distinctively religious or missionary features of its work were assumed by the South India United Church, representing the native Christians of the several communions thus united.

It was necessary, however, that help both in direction and financial support should be forthcoming from missionary sources. By consent of the Madura Mission and the Prudential Committee of the Board, Dr. and Mrs. J. J. Banninga were released for the year from their important service in the Pasumalai Theological Seminary to take charge of this established and extensive mission thus bereft of its leaders. Besides the general supervision, they have had in their care three high schools, a training school, a student boarding home, a couple of other schools, two orphanages, and a leper asylum. By the loan of these missionaries and the carrying of their support while at this emergency work, the American Board has been able to render one more service to overcome the disruptings of the war.

In our Marathi Mission, the Theological Seminary which hitherto has been maintained by the American Board alone has within the year become the Ahmednagar Divinity College, with the cooperation of several mission boards working in Western India and with the hope of further accessions to the number. The Dnyanodaya, too, that modest weekly paper which has been a widely read and influential journal among the Christian people of the Marathi country, has now become the organ of six missions of England, Scotland, and America.

New Union Adventures in China

China, true to her practical instincts and interested rather in fields of work than in fields of thought, has moved toward union by the path of cooperation in mission activities; the effort has been not so much for organic union as for a working partnership. A noteworthy document of the year is the Report of the Board of Cooperation on the Program of Advance in Kwantung Province, through which the missions, the American Board among the number, centering in Canton have indicated their purpose to pull together along the several lines of mission work.

The same end is being attained in China as in India, though the path approaching that end be somewhat different. Within the year at Nanking first steps were taken in the consolidation of the churches connected with the Presbyterian, the London Missionary, and the American Board missions: and the door was left open for other communions to enter. The Christian universities now under way at Peking, Tsinanfu, and Foochow; the proposals for union in medical work in Tientsin and higher educational work in Shansi, all indicate the trend and the rapid breaking down of those narrow and self-centered views which have prevented the best efficiency and economy of mission work. There is food for thought and ground for rejoicing in the single fact that at Canton and Foochow and Tsinanfu and Peking, the four centers in China where this Board is engaged in theological seminary instruction, it is working in Union Theological Schools; in one of which, Canton, eight mission boards, including the Church Missionary Society of England, are combined.

The Outlook

As from the vantage point of this survey we contemplate our mission fields in India, Ceylon, and China, the words which seem to sum it up were written in a recent letter from one of our most far-sighted and efficient missionaries in India: "We have been crying all along that India was passing through a crisis and that that was a special opportunity for a great advance movement; and in a sense we have used up all the vocabulary that we had to try to get something more done; and now, when we feel that we really have come to the supreme opportunity and crisis, we have to repeat the old words and the old cry, and they must lack some­thing of convincing power. But as Sherwood Eddy has said repeatedly during his recent tour, the India he finds today is not in the least the India that he saw three years ago. No one who is not living in India today can begin to realize the tremendous changes that are taking place almost monthly."

There it is: a new India; a new China; a new world; all in the making; and with an urgent, a desperate need of pouring in the Christian influence. The war stayed the natural advance; it did not close opportunity or stop work; in many cases it increased both. But reënforcements could not be secured; our young men and women were absorbed in war work. And funds could not be secured in needed amounts to meet the pressure of the times. Now, after the war and its five-year cheek, we face 1920, the Tercentenary Year, with an accumulated need brought over and an increased challenge before. India, Ceylon, and China are struggling onward; they face immense difficulties; the Christian forces in those lands are eager and loyal, but they are still small and scattered. They need more than ever adequate missionary help.
ARMISTICE OPTIMISM

The Oorfa Bell

When the British forces entered the “Land of Ur,” in the early spring, the old Protestant church bell was taken from its hiding place, set up in the belfry, and rung by a young Armenian who had bought the privilege from his associates. The old church was packed, one thousand standing, and as the bell pealed forth in tones of triumph the men, women, and children of that audience fell into singing and sobbing. What had they not seen! Under what tyranny had they not suffered! Of the five thousand homes standing before the war, only one hundred had been found when they returned from the desert. Of the thousands living before the deportations, but a comparative few had come back to begin their work of rehabilitation. The bell, the symbol of Armenian life, as of Christianity, pealed forth its message of emancipation. It rang out the old and rang in the new. The Turkish tyranny was broken; a remnant had returned; Islam had been thwarted; Armenia was imperishable and Christianity eternally triumphant. Many of them there must have had visions of a new Armenia in which the people would be free to think and act for themselves as never before; where they could have religious liberty far more than toleration; where the Armenian people could go to school and develop their own special life, bring back again the grandeur of the old empire, and build anew a democracy that would stand for all time. No wonder this Remnant broke forth into tearful rejoicings, even though within sight of the bones of their dear ones and within touch of the grave of their missionary martyr friend, Leslie. They had seen the walls of autocracy fall—battlements, watch tower, citadel—and as the red dust was clearing away they stood with strange thoughts amid the friendly stars.

So we, though perhaps to a less degree, rejoiced with great rejoicings last year at the Hartford meeting. The Armistice had been signed; autocracy had been put beneath the heel; Austria would no more tyrannize over the Bohemians; the German coalition would have to take its hand off the Balkans; the African, suffering at the hand of the European exploiter, would be set free for larger and better things. In Moslem lands there was the collapse of the holy war and the downfall of the Caliphate. We saw conditions in the Far East also improving; we felt the weakening of military despotism in Japan and the growth of liberalism; we fancied we saw Japan’s full reorganization, political as well as educational, on lines more Anglo-Saxon and less German; we saw a lessening of press censorship; we fancied we saw the people, in the development of new industrial and commercial life, going forward by leaps and bounds into a real and abiding leadership throughout the East; we felt this rising tide of democracy, not only in Japan, but in Korea, China, and the Philippines as well.

As for Latin-America, who did not dream of a new sense of relationship between the republics south of the Border and the U. S. A.? We may have seen, to be sure, imminent dangers arising from commercial rivalry and from their fear of the United States, yet knowing the idealism of America, we looked forward to larger contacts and a great Pan-American friendship.

But it was more than a new Era for nations and for international relationships. It meant a new epoch in the work of the Kingdom. We saw, for example, the effect of the victory on the vitality of the non-Christian religions; on the non-Christian opinion as to the ideals and to the power of Christian civilization; and we had visions of a new opportunity presented Christianity as the only adequate gospel for international brotherhood. We dreamed, too, of presenting Christianity as never before as the gospel for the rising social aspirations throughout the East. As the Prudential Committee report said, stupendous obstacles in the way of Christ's Kingdom had been abolished. The valleys were truly being exalted; a highway was indeed building in the world's desert for our God.

"No grander dream e'er came unto the world
Than that which we glimpsed through the vistas dim:
A cosmos from a chaos fashioning,
A temple of world freedom for all men."

A SOBERING AFTERMATH

Well, even after these months, not one word would we take back. Our Armistice optimism was justified and our dreams then are true now. That the walls are down no one can doubt who has studied the fields during the year. That a new era has opened every one knows. These great fundamental facts we hold on to. Reconstruction in all our fields is as much on the docket now as it was at Hartford.

The Board, too, has made some progress toward rehabilitation in the various countries most directly affected. Mr. Porter has returned to Prague to help in the Christian work in Czechoslovakia. Some reinforcements, though slight indeed, have gone into the Balkans; and Dr. Barton has been able to inspect practically the entire field there, including Bulgaria, Greece, and Serbia. To Turkey the Board has returned 72 missionaries, including 18 ordained men, 7 unordained men, 17 wives, and 30 single women. The stations at Marash, Aintab, Adana, Mardin, Marsovan, Sivas, and Trebizond remain "occupied." Stations further in the interior, like Cesarea and Harpoot, also Brousia and Bardizag, near Constantinople, which were necessarily abandoned, are in good hands once more. Materially and spiritually, renewals have been made. Time and energy have been lavished upon the cleansing of the buildings and the reorganization of the work. This cleansing process, by the way, has not been small by any means. It is no exaggeration to say that what was done in Cesarea had to be done in practically all the stations where the Turks have been occupying our buildings. There it took from twenty to thirty men exactly two months, working six days a week, to carry away the filth accumulated in the cesspools of the mission premises. It took thirty-five to fifty women the same length of time to scrub the buildings into some state of cleanliness. The vermin that were swept down from the walls were gathered up by the quart.

It ought to be said, too, that the missionaries have been able to get in touch with not a few of the returned Armenians and Greeks, and also to assist the Moslem poor. Employment has been given to people in order to help them along economically. Some schools have been reopened. Those at Constantinople, Smyrna, and Tarsus that were running throughout the war have taken on a new lease of life; while Anatolia College and, to some extent, Central Turkey College have reopened for educational purposes.

Political Uncertainties

Yet we have to acknowledge that the real work of rehabilitation has had to wait upon ratification of the treaties and upon the settlement of the mandatory question. Indeed, until these matters are attended to by America and the Allies, our work will be not only delayed but even endangered. The so-called national movement among the Turks is one that has to be reckoned with. Bands of Turkish soldiers are still ready to take up anew the atrocities against the Armenians, and to make it next to impossible for the missions to gather around them the Armenian settlements and people for whom they worked before the war. The Armenians have not rushed back from their places of refuge and hiding to their old homes. They have sifted through, to be sure, but not in mass movements. Wherever the British and French have gone and protection has been assured, they have returned in good numbers. In the Caucasus, however, and throughout Anatolia proper, they are not sure enough yet of their safety of life and property. Those that have returned to Adabazar, for example, near Constantinople, continue to have their loins girded and their lamps burning, ready for any sudden call to any part of the country, ready to rush into a new Armenian state or to go wherever they can have ample protection, if necessary. Erzroom, Van, and Bitlis and the other fields formerly decimated in the eastern section of the land are still in the same category. Masses are waiting for safe conduct, while the Turks seem to be waiting to massacre. This, with the economic conditions that prevail, continues to prevent the building up of a self-governing system of schools and society in general. Some progress has been made, yet the world must still wait on the settlement of treaties, on the question of mandatories, and upon the actual establishment of law and order under some strong power.

So, then, the Allies are still marking time. Nothing like a League of Nations is actually assured. Political boundaries in the field abroad are still unsettled. Greece, Albania, Bulgaria, not to say Serbia, are struggling hard to secure their own special terms. Constantinople has not yet been neutralized. No mandatory has been set up for Turkey. The Armenians are not yet assured of their own government or of their own boundaries. Czechoslovakia, Jugo-Slavia, and other newly organized states add to this "balkanization" peril. Smyrna is not yet formally Greek. Add to these conflicting aims and claims in the Near East the questions that have been stirred up in Washington as to the relation of Japan and China and of America with Mexico, and it is not hard to realize how much missionary service has been rendered impossible because of the political uncertainties that have followed the Armistice.

Economic Unrest

Another sobering reality has been the economic unrest felt throughout the mission fields. America has had its race riots in Chicago and Omaha, its police troubles in Boston, and one or both in Washington and other cities. Have we realized, however, the significance of the unprecedented riots in orderly Japan, the tremendous influence of the industrial strikes in Spain, the readiness on the part of the Young Turk Party (Committee of Union and Progress!) to throw the people of Turkey more and more into misrule, oppression, graft, and unfailing cruelty, even if it means a free hand to Bolshevism? In the far-off Philippines the bomb has been introduced for the first time as a means of "direct action." Can we fail to realize the effect of these economic industrial troubles upon the rehabilitation work that the American Board has before it?

As for the high cost of living and its tremendous influence upon the work of the churches abroad, but very little imagination is required to make us realize the hampering effect of it all. From every one of the mission fields—Japan, the Philippines, Mexico, Turkey and the Balkans, Spain, Czechoslovakia and Africa—we receive the story of great checking to our work, and of real suffering among the native leaders particularly. It is not an exaggeration to say that as the prices generally have increased 100 per cent, 150 per cent, and 200 per cent, the native Christians have received practically no help. The purchasing power of their salaries, on the contrary, has been steadily decreasing, until now it is a question whether the Board will be able to hold the more capable ones in its service and whether the very workers themselves will not suffer irrevocably. Perhaps nothing has put the brake upon the wheels of progress abroad more than these economic conditions.

Burdening Budgets

Another sobering reality has been forced home as we have faced the Estimates made by the various missions in the face of untold opportunities. Not to speak of the great fields that have long been the responsibility of the Board, but only to dwell upon these countries that are opening up now and should have adequate assistance from the Board: Czechoslovakia—the establishment of a theological seminary involving thousands of dollars and several of our strongest men from America; the development of new stations in cooperation with the Bohemian churches, meaning many thousands of dollars more. Where can the men and money be found for this marvelous opportunity that seems to be peculiarly ours?

From Spain we have a budget suggested as follows: Increase missionary families from one to four, and Spanish workers from twenty to sixty. The annual budget should be raised from $8,000 to $40,000, and property investments from $40,000 to $300,000.
As a sample of the other fields, take the merely tentative figures produced for five-year aggressive evangelistic plan for Constantinople: first year, $109,000; second year, $82,000; third year, $92,000; fourth year, $99,000; fifth year, $103,000. “To make this program complete we should mention the need of an endowment with which to support the work. If $1,500,000 could be raised, it would provide funds enough to begin the work and leave an endowment large enough to meet most of the annual expense. Without such an endowment, it would constitute a heavy burden for the Board. With such an equipment and staff engaged in definitely evangelistic work in Constantinople, we could have a reasonable hope of making a real impression on that great city. We should then be in a position to bring to completion the work of all the other American Missionary Institutions in the city. For unless the people are evangelized, as well as educated; healed in soul as well as in body; and saved for a life of service in distinctly Christian fashion, we shall fail to do our duty in Constantinople. God has abundantly blessed these other institutions; I believe he is now ready to bless our evangelistic work. We have done our bit. Shall we not now attempt to do our best?”

Better Appreciation of Moral Task

These burdening budgets, with the political uncertainties and economic unrest, have had a sobering effect during the past year, yet they have been but of small moment compared with the almost discouraging realization of the great moral task laid upon the Board. Event after event has forced home this realization. Never before have we felt so heavily the immensity of the moral and spiritual work we have to perform. There is the great race prejudice in Africa, for example, stirred up almost as truly as here in our own land because of the new racial consciousness among the blacks themselves and because of the pride and fears of the whites. The war has left Africa with the race problem heightened. The blacks who have served faithfully at the front or have worked in the industries in the great centers can never be the same. They share in the feelings of the times; they demand equal opportunity. The conflict of European interests in Africa leads to a new situation. Will the blacks continue to allow themselves to be slowly de-landed as tribal tenure has to give way to individual holdings? Will the great industrial situation at Johannesburg and other places throughout South Africa bring a new individualism to play among the blacks? At any rate, the racial questions are looming large in Africa—and our task looms larger and larger as we see the necessity of bringing in a spirit of justice which shall give equal opportunity to the black race, a task that we can better conceive of now because of our own shortcomings in this particular.

Again, there is the situation in the Balkans that has been forced upon us during the year as perhaps never before. Considerable pressure has been brought to bear upon the Board by the Greco-Serbian group, by the Albanians, and indirectly by the people from Bulgaria. The very fact that some of our missionaries in Salonica were arrested by the Greeks on the false charge of pro-Bulgarian activities proves the intensity of the racial jealousies that prevail in that Balkan cockpit. The mere dismissal of the missionaries has not lessened the significance of the struggle. What shall the American Board do toward giving the jealous peoples of the Balkans a spirit of cooperation? How can we help avoid the "balkanization" peril and produce those political, economic, and international foundations that are necessary for the settlement of all problems? This is morally and spiritually a task that seems superhuman.

We realize now, as never before, the impossibility of solving the question of tyranny and intolerance in Turkey. Even the Armenian is inclined to take advantage of the Turk when he has the latter in his power, and the Greek himself seems to be showing as much of an unchristian feeling toward the Moslem. How can we help inject into the minds of the millions of the Levant a spirit of tolerance and of love? This is our task and a sobering one, it seems.

We might go into the Far East, too. There is Japan and its relation to Korea and China. Even the missionaries of Japan cannot uphold Japan in her policies toward her subject race in Chosen and toward China. The enormity of the task of helping the liberal elements in Japan so to control the situation permanently as to produce the confidence of China and Korea has been forced home by the events of the year.

Surely we realize, as we did not a year ago, the solemnity and the tremendousness of the task ahead of us.

RECONSTRUCTION OPPORTUNITIES

Nevertheless, as some one said with reference to Mexico, "it always pays to be optimistic." Certainly the year has brought out in a striking way the opportunity that the Board has, along with other missionary societies abroad, in the reconstruction processes that are taking place. As General Foch said in the first battle of the Marne, so may we right now: our center is giving way; our right is retreating; the situation is excellent; we are attacking.

Opportunity to Demonstrate the Power of Christian Missions

We have the wonderful opportunity of demonstrating the power of Christian missions in national and international relationships. This does not mean that the Board is a political organization. It is not party to political machinations within a nation or without. Its business does not include the setting up of governments or the settling of boundary disputes. In its one hundred and nine years of activity in many lands the American Board has never been proved guilty as a breeder of sedition or of political intrigue. Its missionaries are uniformly instructed to regard themselves as the guests of the government by whose permission and under whose protection they labor. In these days of national and international readjustments, when conflicting claims are proposed and national ambitions clash, the Board particularly seeks to maintain a neutral attitude as to the political disposition of the territory where its missions are.

Nevertheless, no missionary or Missionary Board can fail to be interested in the great fundamental political conditions that are to have a bearing upon the growth or decline of the people for whom they work. The Prudential Committee this past year, while it has been urged in vain on all sides by the people of Turkey and the Balkans to bring pressure to bear upon the Senate and House in Washington, not to speak of the Peace Congress itself at Paris, nevertheless was quite within its rights when it told the Armenians that it profoundly felt that justice demanded that the Armenians should be delivered from the atrocities of Turkish tyranny and misrule; and when it expressed the earnest hope that whatever might be the political readjustments in the Near East, the safety of the Armenian people should be so guaranteed and protected that any recurrence of the horrors of past massacres and deportations should be made forever impossible, it was doing its Christian duty. Christian missions must prove a constant stimulus to national and international justice and peace.

There is another phase of the question, moreover, upon which there can be no difference of opinion: namely, that missions tend to develop the mind and morale necessary for good citizenship. It has been shown time and time again that the graduates of American missionary schools in general, and in particular the native Christian staff which has been trained in a democratic church government, have proved the value of Christian missions to democracies and to self-governing races. We think of the Philippines, for example, with its great and growing need for the development of those forces within it which shall enable the Filipinos to remain in the independence that they are securing from America. Nowhere has the value of this form of Christian service been more pronounced throughout the fields than in our own mission field of Mindanao, where the missionaries have brought to play upon all classes of the land the ideals and power of Jesus Christ, and where a small but influential church is turning out good citizens.

Then, too, there is the opportunity of demonstrating the power of Christian missions in settling international problems. The question, for example, of intervention in Mexico today is a matter that could be settled if it were left to Christian missions. Missionaries and Board officials have proved conclusively to themselves, if not to others, that the Mexicans readily set aside their prejudices and their fears when their minds are open to the real American readiness to give them schools, and to help in every possible way to produce the men and women required for the times. Messrs. Tuthill and Bell, on their mission for the Board early in the year, did not fail to get a response to friendliness, and the opportunities that opened to Protestant missionary effort seemed to them so great as to make possible in these days such a complete understanding between the two nations as would do away in time for all time with the question of armed intervention. The sword produced a Cortez, but his intervention did not remain permanent; it stirred up sorrow and strife. The sword took America into Mexico in the '40s. We seized much land for ourselves, but we reaped a harvest of fear and prejudice. The French, supported by the British and the Spanish, pursued their form of armed intervention. They, too, failed without solving the real problem. When we went in with our great wealth years ago, under Diaz, and compelled Mexico to give us certain concessions, we gave promise of solving the problem; but the essentials were wrong, fundamentals were set aside, and the result was the present revolution.
No foreign armed intervention has ever succeeded or ever will. There is no possibility of binding the two nations together along cooperative lines except by a Christian approach on the part of the stronger and healthier neighbor. We must bear the infirmities of the weak, plant our churches, our schools, our hospitals, our industrial and agricultural plants, our printing presses, our personalities, in such a way as to bring about a renewal of the old-time friendship. Here we have the opportunity to demonstrate that Christian missions, if given time and support, will clear away all international troubles and build up the world in peace. As a Mexican exile says, "This talk of intervention should give way to plans for mutual helpfulness." Why, therefore, may we not keep the fundamentals in mind, and prove our good will to the Mexican people through the only kind of cooperation that makes for peace? This certainly would not be inconsistent with a firm insistence that Mexico fulfill her international obligations.

Opportunities for this demonstration in national and international life have been particularly noticeable in Turkey and the Balkans during the past few months. When in Bulgaria this summer, Dr. Barton was asked again and again to express Bulgaria's appreciation of what American missionaries had done for the country through the Bible and modern education; and to emphasize the welcome all missionaries from America would receive at the hands of the Bulgarian people. From the king and premier down, the nation showed its desire not only to secure the material help of America, but also and especially to catch the idealism and moral spirit of this land which played such a big part in the closing days of the war and at the Peace Congress. There is ample opportunity for high and noble effort on the part of American Congregationalism in behalf of a beautiful land and of a people physically strong, sober, industrious, eager for education, and capable of great moral and religious attainment.

In Greece it was a similar story. Our Foreign Secretary was received on all sides with a welcome that could have but one meaning: a desire on the part of Greece to secure American favor and assistance in her great reconstruction work. It is true that much that was said and done at Salonica during Dr. Barton's visit there may have been prompted by a purpose of the authorities to show regret for the unfortunate imprisonment of American Board missionaries through an overzealous and suspicious police force at a time when feeling against Bulgaria was intense, yet we have good reason to believe that what was said by the governor of Salonica and other officials high in authority was based upon a realization of what the missionary Institute there and the American missionaries themselves were contributing to the stability of the nation at a crucial point. The very fact that the young king of Greece called upon our missionaries at Salonica has placed the work in a new light before the people of the country, and emphasized the possibility of doing a better work under the Greek flag.

At Smyrna, in the district taken over by the Greek troops, the commissioner and the Greek bishop both urged Dr. Barton to impress upon the Board the fact that the Greeks and that part of new Greece were ready to cooperate now that they were understanding more clearly the aims, purposes, and effects of the missionary work of the Board. We wonder if any institutions in the Levant ever faced a greater opportunity or have been burdened with a greater responsibility than those at Smyrna, the International College (for young men) and the American Collegiate Institute (for girls). On this littoral of Asia Minor and in the new sections of Greece on the European side of the Ægean Sea we find the people cordial and receptive, and in general unopposed to any effort to enlarge the evangelical work of the Board. There is a great call for a large service in Greece. We must not hold back.

EVENTS OF SPIRITUAL PROMISE

Japan Jubilee

An event full of inspiration to those who understand its significance was the fiftieth anniversary of the Japan Mission. This Jubilee was held in June. The records of the Board bring vividly to the mind the unexpected opening of Japan to missionary service over fifty years ago. Little did the friends of the Board dream in those days, however, that in but a comparatively few years the beginnings of a university for men and a university for women would appear, not to speak of other training institutions too numerous to mention in this small space. Nor would any one have dared prophesy, when the first steps were taken, that such a speedy development of a native church would take place or that the church would possess such virility and aggressiveness. Those were days when slow beginnings could well have been expected and meager results obtained. But God willed otherwise. He guided in the choice of missionaries; he inspired them with extraordinary wisdom and spiritual zeal; he brought to them his chosen Japanese leaders for inspiration and training; he provided supporting friends at home; he removed barrier after barrier in Japan itself, opening section after section until strategic centers throughout the entire empire were taken possession of in his name; and now he has brought his own church in Japan to a position of power and of responsible leadership not anticipated by Board or Mission fifty years ago.

The realization of such a great fact inspires hope and courage as we take the forward look. If God initiated this work, and if therefore through these fifty years he has given indubitable evidence of his mighty presence, where is the friend of the Board who cannot see even greater achievements ahead? These, to be sure, may not be in the form or at the time expected; but come they must if we are constantly open to his progressive leadership in method and spirit. We must see to it that in our building for the future we do not limit, through lack of faith, the will and power of God in this great enterprise of Christianizing this mighty nation that is now reconstructing herself and beginning an international life of tremendous moment.

The Jubilee in Japan finds the mission of the American Board firmly established in the institutions and life of Japan, with such prestige and power as only liberal-mindedness in interpretation, sanity of judgment, a sound spirit of cooperation, diversity of method and substantial results could produce. God grant that the past may be but an earnest of a great future!
Church Independence

It is always gratifying to hear that the native churches are not only asking for independence, but have proved beyond all doubt their ability to assume complete financial freedom from the Board. Such gratifying news, for example, of the readiness with which the Bohemian churches conducted their own work during the war, and were asserting their purpose to control their own destinies, can never fail to be a stimulus to that constituency of the Board which has long been praying for just such results. We learn, too, that the Bulgarian churches have done a truly remarkable piece of work along this same line. We must take this as an earnest of the success some day of the movement in these two countries toward complete independence of all American help. In South Africa, the plan by which the blacks and the whites have shared the control of the churches on an equal footing continues to be promising. It is doubtful if any of the missionaries or the native Zulu leaders themselves would advocate going back to the old basis. This is heartening news, especially in these days when so many of the native churches, like those of Armenia, are compelled for economic reasons to depend more than they did before the war upon the American Board’s help. (Among the latter might also be named the churches of Mexico and Micronesia, all of which have the spirit, but are not equal to the task materially.)

Kukema Conference

This took place in West Africa, on the banks of the Kumema River, in Angola. Delegates came from all directions. It was a larger meeting than the heathen usually assemble for their beer drinks. It was a spiritual feast of four days’ duration. 1,133 attended, blacks and whites on equal footing. This, with the usual crowd of small boys to prepare the food, made a mighty host. It was a feast of tabernacles, booths being made in the bush on all sides, the missionaries living in small grass huts. It was a meeting for prayer and conference, and there was a great deal of singing—such singing as only the Africans can produce. The subjects considered were most interesting: How to find money for the hut taxes; how to win men to Christ; how best to plan a village; how best to lead the Christian life; how to meet the dominant fetishism; how to present the gospel attractively; intemperance and its sad effect upon native schools and character; how to keep the native church straight and pure. It was a memorable occasion; a meeting of “brothers,” and each giving himself in service for the others.

Evangelical Congress, Spain

From Spain comes the report of a most unique congress. It was a conference of representatives of the Protestant churches from all parts of the peninsula, held at Madrid in May, 1919, as a commemoration of the fiftieth anniversary of the beginnings of Protestant work in the peninsula and the establishment of a religious liberty plank in the Constitution of the kingdom. The Congress was held in spite of strikes, martial law, and unsettled conditions. It was in an atmosphere of toleration and a greater readiness on the part of the officials to protect the people of all religious beliefs in the literal carrying out of the constitutional change made in 1868. Five hundred evangelical delegates were present. They displayed their badges openly. They held great gatherings for many days without interference of any sort. Resolutions were drawn up to the government asking for complete religious liberty with reference to civil marriages, the secularization of cemeteries, the removal of requirements upon soldiers and sailors to attend certain masses, the removal of the requirements of examinations on Catholic doctrines before entering government high and normal schools. This is the first large interdenominational gathering held within the nation. The railroads granted special tickets at greatly reduced rates.

Philippines Sunday School Work

What seems to be the most outstanding feature of the Mindanao work up to date—that is, the distinctively religious phase of our missionary service in that great island—is the chain of barrio, or village Sunday schools, reaching out from the Cagayan central Sunday school. There are fifteen of these extension classes. Thirty-five people, nearly all young, serve as teachers; five of these are paid, thirty are volunteers. With these classes the Cagayan Sunday school is the largest among all the Visayan population of the islands. It is claimed, indeed, that it is the largest in all the Philippines. The attendance is from 400 to 1,000—very large figures in a Catholic country.

The northern coast of Mindanao continues to be open to the gospel. A missionary from outside was recently passing through Cagayan while evangelistic services were being held. He was invited to preach in the Plaza. When he gave the invitation, twenty-two men came forward and took his hand, much to his amazement and delight. Nothing like that ever happened in his own district. He could hardly believe his ears when told that the same thing had been going on for two nights; and when he was told that this same thing happened, and could be repeated, in a dozen different places along the north coast of Mindanao, he thought the field wonderfully open. Multiply such a situation by twenty and we not only feel the real problem in Mindanao, but realize the opportunity that we face.

New Station in Mexico

An event of the year whose significance will grow upon us as the years go by has been the establishment of a missionary family at Mazatlán, on the west coast of Mexico. This means the beginnings of a new mission station involving a school for girls which, under the Woman's Board of the Pacific, will develop into institutions like those conducted for years by the Woman's Board of Missions and the Woman's Board of Missions of the Interior. It means a mission plant at the distributing center of the west coast, radiating its evangelical ideas and life out into two large states. Thousands, because of closer contacts with the outside world, will be open to the gospel from this important port.

We face a bigger and harder task in Mexico than we had before we exchanged territory with the Methodists South; a field much less compact and with a population nearly five times as great as before. We have fairly strong centers at both extremes of the field—at Guadalajara, in the conservative center of Mexico; and at Hermosillo, in Sonora, close by America. This new station at Mazatlán places a plant right within the midsection of our strip, and therefore close by the heart of our "responsibility." May the promise of Mazatlán—like its scenic beauty—hold us with peculiar fascination until we are assured of victory!

Central Turkey Mission Meeting

Perhaps nothing from Turkey brought so much encouragement in midsummer as the news that one of the missions had been able to reorganize and to hold its first "annual meeting" since 1915. Twelve out of thirty-two of the missionaries were back upon the field, and all the stations occupied with the exception of Oorfa. Many of the native leaders had been saved; in fact, the loss in the Central Turkey district was less than that of most of the other sections of the land. The missionaries were able to look at things in the large, and the action that they took will long be memorable, showing as it did their vision, their broad-minded view of things, and their big plans.

At this memorable meeting of the Central Turkey Mission at Adana, in June, one question was of special moment, namely, should the mission continue its work through the evangelical branch of the church, or should it turn its attention largely to a work within the established or Gregorian Church—a question that has been on the docket ever since the work in Turkey began, a hundred years ago. The general sentiment was that the Protestants of Marash, Aintab, Hadjin, Oorfa, and Adana rendered the separate continuance of the native evangelical community a foregone conclusion. While recognizing the progress of the Gregorian Church toward a more liberal policy, and expressing sincere sympathy with all aspirations toward enlightenment and spiritual life, the mission went on record in the judgment that the continuance of the Evangelical Church organization was essential to the progress of evangelical truth in Armenia and Turkey, and that this organization afforded the most natural and needed approach to the Mohammedans. The mission therefore recommended to the Board that the latter do all in its power to reorganize and conserve the evangelical churches and schools. They felt that the evangelical movement in Turkey meant the development of spiritual life within the Old Church and within the Turkish communities as well.

Gregorian Bible Study

Another event of importance is the fact that the Gregorian Church itself seems to have adopted a liberal attitude toward Bible study and other means of devotional life among the individual members of the church. For example, a Bible school, with over 600 pupils, has been organized in the Gregorian Church at Aintab, and the desire has been expressed to extend this movement into other Gregorian communities. It is the hope that the Patriarch at Constantinople will issue official approval of such a movement. The mission has also asked the World's Sunday School Association to support a secretary for Bible study among this ancient church throughout the Near East.
Events of great spiritual moment have taken place throughout the Turkey field, where the Armenians have been able to express their religious longings. At Harpoot, in Aintab, Adana, and in fact all over the country, the Armenians have crowded into the Protestant churches, and have stood for hours listening to the simple evangelical interpretation of the gospel and giving evidence of a tremendous longing of soul. At Harpoot, for example, after the missionaries returned there the church was crowded continuously, some of the people making the confession that they were glad for all that had happened to them during the past few years, because, as they said, "Though we have lost all, yet we have found our Saviour and gained our souls."

Opening Moslem Doors

The call for Mohammedan work is as urgent as it was a year ago, perhaps even more so. The missionaries generally are of the opinion that the time has come to call definitely for the immediate location of at least one man and one woman in each station center, with direct work for Moslems in mind. The interviews that are taking place, the open investigations on the part of the Moslems themselves, the crowding into the schools that are now in operation, the apparent eagerness to fill the mind with knowledge—and even to get new conceptions of God and his work—are evident among the Mohammedans. Scores if not hundreds of them, having come in touch with science and with the art of the Western world through the war, are open as never before to the missionary approach through lectures, schools, colleges, and personal friendship. Perhaps we could even speak of the approach through the Evangelical Churches because of their freedom from ritual and because of their more liberal views and methods. The call is truly tremendous, and must be attended to.

Cry of Orphans

We must not forget the call for the orphans in Asia Minor, pathetic as it is big. In Cesarea, for example, we find that in that district from which so many thousands were driven and where thousands were butchered in cold blood, some 40,000 Armenians are now returning, one-eighth of whom are orphans. In that same district, of the 90,000 Greeks, 1,000 are orphans; of the 800,000 Moslems, 4,000 are without parents. These figures probably are true of all the stations. The Near East Relief Committee cannot meet all the need, especially when we stop to consider the moral and spiritual phases of the enterprise. The Board will have to carry its share, bringing these orphans particularly under the influence of missionaries. This is a call that is perhaps as urgent as any, when we think of individual needs and of the necessity of developing future Christian leaders in that land that has lost so much. What the missionaries of Harpoot said when they got back to the field and had had an opportunity of feeding these orphans for a while can be said by all others who have had a taste of the work, "It was a great joy to see them turn from gaunt, lifeless boys and girls into plump and interesting human beings." We could even add one more sentence, "What greater joy it will be when these real boys and girls have caught the ideals and spirit of the Master to such an extent that they will devote their lives to the service of the Mohammedans among whom they live!"

"The doors of the world are heavy and tall,
But the cry of a child can pierce them all;
(A cry of a child in anguish sore.)
And though it sounds from a land apart,
"Tis at our threshold and at our heart.
(A child is crying beyond our door.)"

REPORT OF THE TREASURER
For the Year ending August 31, 1919

ENCOURAGING INCREASE IN RECEIPTS

We have good reason for rejoicing over the continued increase in the receipts of the American Board. A year ago the receipts were larger than for any previous year, and showed a gain in the twelve months of $61,290.01. In the year just now completed, this gain has not only been held, but we have made a further gain of $214,296.59. The Board reached its million dollar mark in 1911. It took a whole century to reach that goal. It has taken only eight years to reach and pass the half-way point toward the second million.

The receipts coming from our different sources of supply are as follows:

It is a cheering feature that the notable gains this year have not been from legacies, but from the churches and from living donors. The gain from the churches was $49,579.09; and including the Emergency Fund, which came mostly from individuals, the gain in individual gifts was $72,854.35.

EMERGENCY FUND

It was foreseen at the beginning of the year that, with the certainty of increased expenses and with a debt brought over from the previous year, a large increase would be needed in receipts, and to secure this increase an appeal was made for an Emergency Fund. The need applied as well to the Woman's Boards, and so it was made a joint appeal.

The total amount contributed for the Emergency Fund was $122,128.86. From this amount $23,083.02 was paid to the Woman's Board, Boston, $19,235.29 to the Woman's Board of the Interior, and $3,525 to the Woman's Board for the Pacific. This left $76,330.55 for the expenses of the American Board alone.
TWENTIETH CENTURY FUND AND LEGACIES

The Twentieth Century Fund was established for the pro-rating of legacies over a period of three years. It amounted at the beginning of the year to $399,722.77. Cash receipts from estates, not including what was taken from the Chandler bequest, amounted to $181,550.77. The total of the Twentieth Century Fund and what was received from estates was $581,273.54, and the one-third of this amount available for current use was $193,757.84.

The use of the Twentieth Century Fund for pro-rating legacies was begun eleven years ago. There has been a continuous growth in the fund. Hitherto only one-third of the income has been used annually. The ability of the Fund not only to hold its own but to maintain a healthy growth has been demonstrated. This led the Finance Committee and the Prudential Committee to conclude that this year we could safely use all of the income of the Fund without thirding it. The Twentieth Century Fund is now $387,515.70, or only $12,207.07 less than a year ago. The income of the Fund this year was $16,367, and all of it was applied for current expenses.

CONDITIONAL GIFT FUNDS

Sixty-seven new Conditional Gifts were received during the year, amounting in all to $117,949.84. The general Conditional Gift Fund is now $1,063,141.44. Other Conditional Gifts are the Danforth Fund of $50,000, the Washburn Fund No. 1 of $8,100, and the Washburn Fund No. 2 of $16,750, making the total of all the Conditional Gifts now held $1,137,991.44.

Other special Conditional Gift funds, $60,000 in amount, not available for the regular current work but hitherto classed with Conditional Gifts, have now been released to meet the conditions of these gifts.

The number of new Conditional Gifts testifies to the favor with which the plan is regarded. Business men are coming to see its advantages in providing for life beneficiaries. The promptness, regularity, and certainty of the semi-annual payments of income to such beneficiaries—and these always in undiminished amounts—commend the plan.

GENERAL PERMANENT FUND

The additions to the General Permanent Fund during the year were as follows:—

Matured Conditional Gift of Mr. Thomas S. Johnson, Syracuse, N. Y. $39,984.00
Legacy of Mr. Norman H. George, Newton, Mass. 10,000.00
Gift of Mr. and Mrs. Pearl Garner, Grinnell, Ia. 945.00
From First Congregational Church, Germantown, Pa. 10.00

This fund now amounts to $572,892.93.

WOMAN’S BOARDS AND CANADA CONGREGATIONAL FOREIGN MISSIONARY SOCIETY

Profound appreciation is due to the Woman’s Boards and to the Canada Congregational Foreign Missionary Society for cooperating so generously. The success of these and other cooperating societies is well deserved. The amounts received and expended from all these sources show a healthful increase.

Much gratitude is due to the churches and individuals who contributed so loyally all through the twelve months of our fiscal year, and particularly to those who gave so freely during the closing days of August.

EXPENDITURES

The two largest items of increase in expenses were the high cost of exchange in China and the increased amount expended for transportation.

Exchange rates have been increasingly unfavorable. The United States gold dollar, which less than three years ago would purchase two and sixteen one hundredths Chinese or Mexican silver dollars, will purchase only one Chinese dollar now. At certain times during the past year our United States gold dollar would purchase even less than the one Chinese dollar. No improvement in the present rate appears in sight. In addition to our regular appropriations for our work in China, the additional cost of exchange during the year, for the American Board alone, was $97,901.67, and for the American Board and the Woman's Boards together $147,848.50.

The cost of ocean passages has been doubled, and in some instances more than doubled. A larger number of missionaries than usual, either newly appointed or returning to the missions from furloughs in this country, have been sent out. The increase in the item of traveling expenses and outfits for the American Board, not including the Woman's Boards, was $36,576.77, and for all the Boards $56,887.74.

SUMMARY OF RESULTS

A summary of the results for the year shows that the missions cost $1,383,470.19
Administration and other home expenses were 124,596.56
The debt at the beginning of the year was 26,824.01

Total expenses $1,534,889.76

As previously stated, the total receipts were $1,523,302.59
Amount due from Cooperating Societies in excess of amount due the previous year 18,792.23

Total $1,542,094.82
From this total we deduct the total disbursements 1,534,880.76

Balance at credit of Board for new year $7,205.06

A threatened deficit has been averted. The result brings good cheer.

YET LARGER RECEIPTS ARE IMPERATIVELY NEEDED

We need annually for the American Board at least $2,000,000. No other great foreign mission board has suffered during the war as ours has suffered. We need this $2,000,000 to complete the restoration of our work in war-stricken lands, and to support adequately our missionaries and native workers. We need it to provide the long-delayed reinforcements for our important work in Japan and the Philippine Islands, and to avail ourselves of the opportunities, greater and more promising than ever before, in India, China, and Africa. The time has come for larger and more sacrificial giving.

AUDITORS' CERTIFICATE

The books and accounts of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, Frank H. Wiggin, Treasurer, have been carefully examined for the year ended August 31, 1919, under our direction by the American Audit Company, of this city, and their report of same is now submitted and included in our certificate, as follows:—

THE AMERICAN AUDIT COMPANY
Boston, October 7, 1919.

EDWIN H. BAKER, ESQ.,
Chairman, Board of Auditors,
American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, Boston, Massachusetts.

Dear Sir: We beg to advise that we have audited the books and approved the vouchers of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions for the fiscal year ended August 31, 1919, and hereby certify to the accuracy of the accounts for the year as stated in summarized form in the general ledger, closing with a Surplus of $7,205.06 to the credit of the Board.

In the course of our examination we have checked the entire cash receipts and disbursements for the year, and have verified the balances in safe and on deposit at the end of the period under review.

Respectfully submitted,

THE AMERICAN AUDIT COMPANY,
(Signed) By James W. Hall, C. P. A.,
Resident Manager.
We have examined the certificates of stocks, bonds, and all other securities of the Board as recorded in pages One Hundred Eighty to Two Hundred Seven, inclusive, of the Securities Record Book of the Treasurer, and have found same to correspond perfectly with that record, which record has been checked and proven by the expert accountants, above referred to, with the balances as they appear in the ledger accounts of these securities, the aggregate amount of same being Six Million One Hundred Forty-One Thousand Five Hundred Thirty-Four and 88/100 Dollars ($6,141,534.88).

The bonds of the Treasurer, Assistant Treasurer, and Cashier were submitted to the Auditors and found to be in order, after which they were returned to the Chairman of the Prudential Committee, Custodian of same.

EDWIN H. BAKER,
HERBERT J. WELLS,
SAMUEL WOOLVERTON,

Auditors.
